a crash course in college life CUSTOMS

by Sarah Nelson

Soon to be freshmen, as well as transfer students, were able to experience MTSU during last summer's eight CUSTOMS sessions. These orientations provided first time college students with a look at university life. Student Orientation Advisors (SOA's) were on hand to give tours and answer any questions these new Raiders had concerning scholastic and extracurricular activities. Ports-of-Call and Ports-of-Interest enabled everyone to learn more about MTSU.

According to Gina Poff, director of CUSTOMS, the goals of these sessions are to "make sure that students feel at home at MTSU, are prepared for the first day of classes, are registered, advised, and comfortable with the transition to MTSU." After the first day of activities there was a banquet where students and their parents were able to meet representatives of the faculty and staff.

CUSTOMS was a fun way for new students to prepare for the fall semester at MTSU. These two-day sessions provided everyone with information to ease assimilation into the MTSU student body. Students scheduled classes, found organizations to join, and made new friends.

"Statistics show that students who attend 'CUSTOMS sessions are better adjusted and more confident," said Poff. With these stats in mind a ninth session has been added for the summer of 1996. CUSTOMS was clearly MTSU's passport to campus life.

For the first week of the fall semester the President had a picnic to welcome new students to the campus. These two are having a blast playing "joust", one of the many activities available for students.

During CUSTOMS students participated in many different activites. Many students took advantage of the "in between time" to make new friends, discuss concerns with parents or peers, or strike a pose for the guy with the camera.

S.O.A.'s were responsible for assistig new students. They gave tours, answered questions, and helped students schedule classes. Here S.O.A.'s gather in the JUB as they prepare for the hectic time of TRAM registration.

Homecoming '95 Mardi Gras in the 'Boro

by: Heather Hybarger

Homecoming is a time for students to let down their hair, have some fun, and not worry about anything for an entire week, and that's just what MTSU students did Oct. 29-Nov. 4.

The Mardi Gras theme was embraced on Halloween night by a Masquerade Ball. Homecoming week also saw the Grand Opening of the new Recreation Center, as well as such traditional events as the Chili Cook-off, Fight Song Competition, Homecoming Parade and, of course, the Homecoming Game.

One of the most attractive Homecoming events, according to Beth Little, Homecoming Director, was the Masquerade Ball. "A lot of people dressed up, and the decorations were really nice," she said.

Several things were done differently than had been done in the past, Little said. "A lot of the activities were held at night and at the Rec Center. We brought the pep rally and Fight Song Competition back to campus." These events were held on the Knoll but had previously been held off campus.

Events such as the Tug-of-War were held in the Rec Center, as well as several pool relays. "We had great participation from all the groups," Little said. "School spirit was really good."

Homecoming had its fair share of politics as well, when students exercised their right to vote, not only on their Homecoming Queen, but a $65 increase in the Student Activity Fee. Mary Katherine Gilbert was crowned Homecoming Queen on Nov. 4, and the fee increase passed.

New Rec Center helps students shape up

The 12 million dollar recreation center opened amid much fanfare this fall. The recreation center was an immediate hit. One of the most popular things to do is to play racquetball on one of the six courts. The weightroom and the cardiovascular workout area are also among the crowd favorites. Aerobics classes and mountain climbing are among the many classes that are sought out.

"One of the great things about the recreation center is that you do not have to be an athlete to enjoy it," said sophomore David Donahue. Many people go there just to swim or to walk around the three lane track that is suspended above the six basketball courts.

Intramural sports have also become more popular since the opening of the recreation center. Basketball, wrestling, innertube water polo, wallyball, and racquetball were among the many intramural tournaments that were held inside the new facility. Most of these tournaments have had great success in terms of participation.

The recreation center has also became a place where people go to just hang out. Many people just go there to shoot some basketball with there friends or to play a game or two of friendly racquetball. Yet there are those that go there in search of a serious pick up game of basketball or an intense workout as well.

The new recreation center has something for everybody. It has equipment for the serious athlete and the health conscious as well as the track and pool for those who just want to burn some energy.

Mike Andress scales the climbing wall in the new Recreation Center. The realistic and challenging climbing wall is located just inside the main entrance to the center and is one of the most popular features of the new facility.

For the serious body builder, the area for free weights is a popular spot in the new recreation center. Here students can watch their workout in the wall-to-wall mirrors.

To Keep or Not To Keep, That is the Question. Nathan Price decides whether he would like the fee increase to stay or not. Amy Gasser is next in line.

Another year has come to end which means the end to another busy year for the Student Government Association. SGA is one of the most active organizations on campus, always looking out for the interests of the students and trying to get them more involved in campus activities. This year was no different.

SGA started the year by sponsoring an organizational fair where all of the campus organizations on campus could try and recruit new members. Around 30 organizations participated in the fair which was held on the grassy area in front of the KUC. Some of the organizations in attendance were MTSU Right to Life, Christian Student Center, and OWLS.

During the fall elections, SGA held a referendum on the $65 fee increase to pay for the proposed new stadium. The purpose for he campus-wide referendum, according to the SGA, was that students may not have had enough warning about the increase. So the referendum was provided to give the students a vote and to make sure the increase had student supported. A well-publicized campaign accounted for a record turnout for the election, and the fee increase won a favorable vote by the students.

Also in the fall election were elections for freshman senators and homecoming queen. All students were allowed to choose five of the 19 candidates on the ballot for queen, and to vote for five of the seven freshmen on the ballot for SGA senators.

"My goal as senator is to get a better knowledge of what Politicians go through as well as improve the MTSU community," said Tinisha Buttrey, one of the freshmen senators elected.

planning for the future

Disappearing parking lots, construction blockades, closed roadways, unattractive piles of debris—they mean progress, growth, improvements and expansion on campus, and they're all part of the master plan for the university.

The master plan is a long range agenda for new buildings and expanded facilities to be added to campus. Most immediaate on the plan are the business/aerospace building, the new library, football stadium, telecommunications building, recreational area, and a parking garage at Kirksey Old Main. Future projects include a liberal arts building, an arts facility, expanded dormitories and dining halls.

The effects of the master plan are already visible with construction of the new business/aerospace building, to be open by spring 1998. The $22 million facility will be four floors, 32 classrooms, a 250-seat lecture hall, 140 private offices and eight computer classrooms. An open courtyard the size of an indoor ice hockey rink will have landscaped terraces, seating areas and walkways.

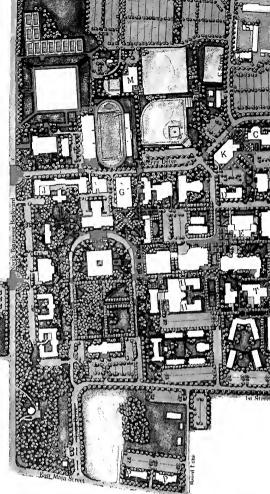

The building will make the area of between the Mass Comm building and Corlew Hall the central academic core of campus. "This building will mean everything to our department," said Dr. Bill Herrick, assistant professor of aerospace. "The new equipment will be five-fold better, and, we'll be up in the air where we belong!"

Another welcome addition to campus will be the new library facility, slated to be completed by 1999. Threatened by loss of accredidation of the university, a plan for a new $32.75 million library facility was included by Gov. Sundquist in this year's state budget.

The four-story building will have an 800,000 book volume capacity, 2,500 seats, 150 computer terminal stations. The building will be situated in conjunction with the new business and aerospace building to define the boundaries of a large public quadrangle. The atrium will be used to direct natural daylight into the reader and study spaces.

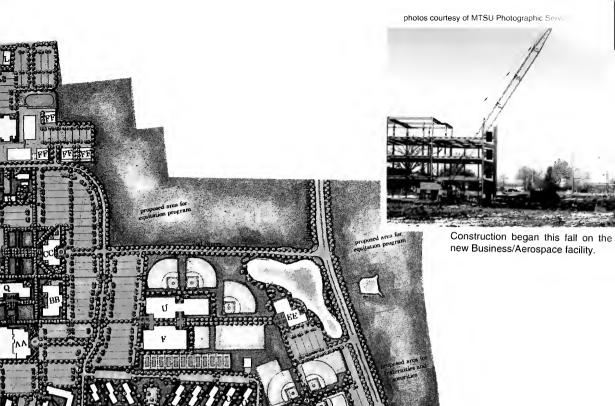

The model on the right represents what the new library facility will look like when completed before the year 2000.

Construction on the new Business/ Aerospace facility began this fall, with the completed building to look like the model on the left.

The Native American Heritage Society celebrated its first full year as a campus organization by continuing to educate members and the community of the Native American way of life. They spent the year by helping charities, sponsoring speakers, and organizing an entire fair.

The purpose of the organization is to educate the masses about Native American arts and crafts, and their way of life in order to prevent the prejudice and mistreatment of the various tribes. There is more to being Native American than the blood running through your veins--it is a way of life that is meant to be a peaceful one.

One of the activities that NAHS sponsored this year was the Arts and Crafts fair that was held on Oct. 27-28.

The fair, located in the Tennessee Livestock Center, featured a of arts and crafts that were made by true American part of the fair was a sacred ceremonial "Fire Dance" and lectures.

The fair was financed through on and off campus donations. The participants donated their time to the fair and other donations were received from the sale of Native American artifacts made by members of NAHS and from the Sociology and Anthropology Department and the June Anderson Women's Center.

Students travel to study a world away

by Monica Schlageter

France, Italy, England, Japan, Germany and Scotland all have one thing in common. All are foreign countries that MTSU students can travel to through a study abroad program. According to Amanda Ball, Study Abroad Coordinator, students can choose from a variety of cultures to attend school, work or live.

One program that gives students a chance to see the world is the Cooperative Center Study in Britain (CCSB). The CCSB is an educational program of 17 colleges and universities with member and affiliate schools in several states. The program plans seven regularly scheduled study abroad programs in England, Scotland, Ireland and Australia. Students can receive credit for completing their CCSB program. This year members of MTSU's faculty will teach programs at CCSB.

Many departments offer students a chance to see the world as they learn. Art department students have an opportunity to see Italy. Students in this program will live and paint in the small urban town of Guappio.

Senior Chris Ervin is planning to spend four months in Germany this spring and summer under the study abroad program.

"The prospect of studying in Germany is both frightening and exciting. Despite studying the German language and culture for three years, I don't know what to expect. I don't even know how to spend a mark yet!", he said. "But I feel confident that after a few weeks I will gain much more confidence with the language than I've ever had."

The annual Study Abroad Fair, with tables set up with information about different countries' programs, gave students an opportunity to learn more about studying in another culture.

German study abroad students got the opportunity to see the remains of the Berlin Wall.

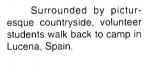

While studying in Ecuador, students had the chance to visit ancient Incan ruins.

World AIDS Day . . . what they might have left

by Monica L. Schlageter

All was silent in the glass cube in the KUC Lounge except for the soft squeaking of markers writing name, after name, after name....

The Art department used the glass cube to teach students about AIDS and remember victims of the virus by commemorating World Aids Day / A Day Without Art. Last year the department received a list of people in the performing arts who have died because of AIDS and read the names aloud in front of an empty cube.

This year the department took a different route by having volunteers from the Art, English, Speech and Theater departments write the names from the list on the exhibit area in the KUC. Event coordinator Charles Jansen was pleased with the project this year and stated that many of the volunteers came in and offered their help.

The writing of the names was to last until two o'clock, but by twelve the glass wall were already covered. Jansen plans to make the event have a bigger impact next year.

"We may repeat with something to make the writing more visible and have a video playing in the cube during the day. The writing is not enough to attract people."

A volunteer writes the names of performing artists that have died with AIDS on the glass walls of the KUC display area.

In the early 1960s a barn designed to be a dairy facility became home for the art department. The idea for the art barn came from Art professor Lewis Snider, because the cement floors would be perfect for a clay studio. A major part of the barn today is still devoted to clay.

The barn was built in 1927 and was deemed a fire hazard in 1994. According to security officers the barn could burn down in under six minutes. Discussion of a new art facility that would double the usable space of the department have taken place, but no plans are in progress.

Poor facilities have not affected the quality of the program. The art department has become the largest and most diversified program in the middle of the state. Recently, murals and colorful paintings have been added the old barn giving life to the wooden panels that the paint hides.

Brian Barnes, a member of Sigma Nu, discusses the fall rush process with incoming freshmen.

Amy Cole hugs her new Delta Zeta sorority sister after the bids for fall rush were announced.

THE RUSH TO BE GREEK By Nancy Figueras

New and old Kappa Delta sorority sisters celebrate the end of rush on 3id Day.

Guys and girls from all different areas decide to rush for several common reasons. Many rushees are just interested in learning what Greek Life is all about. Another more universal reason is the opportunity to meet new friends outside of those from high school. Of course, there is another reason to join -- which is to have fun, fun, fun!

The term "rush" that sororities and fraternities give to the series of nights they meet their prospective members is not exaggerated.

"Rush is an exhausting, hectic, and exciting time, "says Kelly Guy, a rushee and now a member of Kappa Delta.

Rush kicks off the beginning of Greek Life in a sorority or fraternity. It begins with an open orientation for all students wishing to be a part of this system of sisterhood or brotherhood. Then the next night the festivities begin. Each rushee is introduced to each of the sororities or fraternities so that both the rushee and rushers get an idea of what the other is like.

The next few nights that folllow are characterized by a series of parties sponsored by each of the sororities or fraternities and their councils. Each party exhibits the individuality of each group. Rushees learn about the history of each organization, the personality of its members, and the importance of sisterhood or brotherhood. Each party is by invitation only, and from there the rushees choose which group they would like to join.

Finally, Friday rolls around, the big bid day. "Bid day was nerve-wracking," says Michelle Schorp, another rushee of Delta Zeta. Two hundred girls sit in one room, holding in their hands the name of their future sisterhood.

The bid day for fraternities is not so tense. The rushees pick up their bids at a designated place, where they choose which bid they are accepting. Then all the rushees rush out to meet their new sisters or brothers for an unforgettable night.

Rush allows students to meet a diverse group of people even if they do not choose to join. Rush also promotes Greek Life and allows the different chapters to continue their existence.

Dana Cowles, of Alpha Omicron Pi, said it best: "Rush is the lifeline of our organization."

The most endangered species on campus: student parking lots

by: Rob Shumate

This year seemed to bring a shortage of an already rare substance. This dwindling substance, which most students find to be very precious, is a particular hue of green paint that can be found only at various locations around campus on parking lot sidewalk curbs...

This shortage seems to be directly related to the growing of the campus via construction. There simply is not enough room to build all of the proposed facilities and the necessary parking. In fact, it seems green spaces are mysteriously turning white at various locations on campus, and faculty are claiming those. Some students became upset when they learned that the green passes which they bought are all but useless.

As it stands, most students, even those living on campus, are forced to park in the black spaces that line the outside edge of the campus. Richard Gregory, a sophomore mechanical engineering major, says that "it is ridiculous that the university does not have priority parking for those students living on campus, and it is equally ridiculous that teachers are commandeering student dorm parking."

Another problem that is connected with the lack of parking is the fact that this forces many females living in dorms on campus to park in remote locations. Melanie Stackhouse, a freshman, says, "a lot of the time I have to park over by the horse stables... it is scary walking across campus at night and it's a hassle because they tell us we shouldn't walk alone." This lack of parking is placing many young women in jeopardy.

Many students feel that parking should have been improved before construction was started, thus alleviating the problem before it even began. But now it seems as the academic year draws to an end that students will be forced to make the long hikes to their cars. Pack plenty of water and grab your mace, because it's a long lonely walk.

Students gather to hear "For Kate's Sake" at the first Concert on the Knoll of the school year.

Friday afternoon stress relief Concerts Knoll ON THE

by: Rob Shumate

College academics have the potential to be incredibly stressful and from a nervous point of view , debilitating. What with finals, midterms , and the dreaded pop-quiz, students need a time to just relax and unwind with friends. That is exactly what was offered to students when music on the knoll was introduced.

Students can sit on a comfortable grassy lawn, kick back an listen to fellow students and local talent perform without fear of a grizzled old professor's grim glare. The fears of essays and equations were put to the wind without a thought as carefree music replaced anxieties and rejuventated constitutions.

During a rap concert on the knoll in the fall, officer Randall Flag shut down the concert supposedly because it was too loud. An investigation was launched, and as it turns out, MTSU is exempt from the noise ordinances that the police claim were violated. With this new development the police claimed that they had reports that the music was offensive and contained harsh language. Had the police originally stated the true claims of profanity rather that the cry of noise violations, the cries of racism and oppression could have been averted because the artists were warned that they may have to tone down their language. They agreed.

Even with this one incident, the Music on the Knoll series continues to offer students free entertainment on Friday afternoons....and even the Rap on the Knoll was rescheduled.

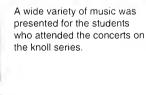

The lead singer of "Shazam" entertains the crowd gathered to hear their concert on the knoll.

The "Yo, MTSU Raps" concert was interrupted when complaints were made about the noise. Here, rappers perform at the SGA Organizational Fair.

MTSU football plans to go Division I-A in 1998

The announcement came as no surprise to some because the move has been rumored about for several years but most people thought that it would never happen. Yet they are set to begin play in Division IA in 1998.

The move was made amidst much controversy. Most of the controversy surrounding this move involves the amount of money it is going to take to fund this move, around $950,000 a year according to university officials. Part of this money will be raised by a $65 increase on the costs of activity fees. The increase on activity fees was voted on by the student body and passed by a vote of 1,214 to 889. The money will be used to expand stadium seating, raising its capacity from 30,000 seats which are needed for the move. Construction on the stadium is set to begin on December 1,1996 and be completed by September 1, 1997.

There are several other things that MTSU must do before they will be allowed to begin play in the Division IA. They must increase the number of athletic scholarships given and have an average attendance of 17,000 for one season.

After entering the new division seven out of eleven opponents must be in Division IA. They have already announced a game against LSU of the SEC and a four-game series against the University of Alabama Birmingham. They are also negotiating dealswith three other SEC schools and two Big Ten schools.

Here at MTSU, the first ever collegiate chapter of 100 Black Men was formed. Spearheaded by President James Walker, who is a member of the 100 Black Men of Middle Tennesse, the Collegiate 100 was created during the fall semester.

The 22 chartering members were carefully selected based on their academic performance and recommendations from faculty and staff of the University. These young men are people who conduct themselves in a professional manner, demonstrate leadership skills, and enjoy working in the community.

These are men of success. The 100 Black Men of America is a national non-profit civic organization that is composed of African-American men who industry and business leaders, doctors, lawyers, educators and public officials.

Members quickly became organized by electing officers, drafting a constitution, and became officially recognized on this campus. Their main volunteer program deals with mentoring youth at Bradley Elementary School in Murfreesboro.

The Collegiate 100 will continue to be positive African-American role models in their community and where ever they go. Members hope the growth of the Collegiate 100 will continue to spread nationally, with the birth of it here at Middle Tennessee State University.

The 71st year of theatre at MTSU was filled with an array of exciting plays.

Opening the 1995-96 season in October was a powerful drama "A Piece of My Heart" by Shirley Lauro. The play brought the experiences of six women that served in Vietnam to Tucker Theatre. Costume design for the play was done by student Joy Warden.

To celebrate the Christmas spirit in December theatre students preformed the Dickens novel "A Christmas Carol" adapted by Dale E. McGilliard. This latest adaptation of the Christmas classic produced the largest set ever built for the MTSU theatre.

"Although at the time it tried my patience, it provided me with the unique challenge of coming up with solutions to problems where I couldn't just go buy or rent the equipment I needed. I was forced to work within the tight constraints of an educational theatre budget" said Michael J. Geiser, Assitant Techincal Director/Master Carpenter. In this play the hair and make up design for the cast was created by Tammy Potts-Merrit.

After the elaborate production of "A Christmas Carol," the department danced into the simple, but awarding winning "Baltimore Waltz" by Paula Vogel. Lighting designer for the play was student John Vest and costumes were designed by Wendy Solomon.

In April, rock opera was brought to campus with the performance of the musical production of "Jesus Christ Superstar" by Andrew Lloyd Weber and Tim Rice. The recount of the story of Jesus the Nazareth expanded this year's productions to include a musical. Lighting design was created by student John Vest.

Every year the MTSU theatrical department closes the season with a children's performance. This year the department preformed the adaptation of the Chinese folktale Sea Girl by Francis Elitzig.

Jason Cook and Lynn Gangover dance during a scene of "Baltimore Waltz," the theatre department's February production.

The MTSU Theatre department produced "A Piece of My Heart" in October. Joy Warden designed costumes for the performance.

With his elaborate costume, the "Ghost of Christmas Future" made an appearance in the production of "A Christmas Carol."

Living IN A GREEK house

by Nancy Figueras

Do you ever want to know what really goes on in these normal looking houses with the wild reputations? Most people would think the daily schedule for the guys that live in a fraternity house would be: shower, get dressed, go to class, goof off, and party, party, party....

However, not many fraternity guys would describe this as their daily schedule. The average fraternity guy spends his day going to school, relaxing, working, watching television, or maybe even studying. Many guys participate in various intermurals or in clubs related to their major. Jonathan Cothran of Beta Theta Pi describes living in a fraternity basically as "Having a good time."

This may leave you wondering how these guys keep their grades up and find time to study. Most of the guys in a fraternity will tell you that time management is the key to doing well in school. Some members put their fraternity before school, but most of the time parties are planned in advance so each member can choose their own priorities. Some fraternities like Alpha Gamma Rho have a required GPA and designated studying hours.

Fraternity guys like living in a fraternity house for several reasons. One of those reasons is the shared closeness among brothers of a fraternity.

"I enjoy being around the other guys, and I do not have to worry about finding a ride someplace," said Johnathan Legg.

Another plus to living in a fraternity house is that there is a great amount of common interests shared among the brothers. However, probably the most popular reason that separates living in a fraternity house from a dorm or at home is that there is unlimited freedom. There are very little or no rules, so they each basically take care of themselves.

To sum it all up, there is a nothing like living in a fraternity house with a bunch of crazy young men. Mac Rodgers of Alpha Gamma Rho says, "It is a lifetime experience, and something every guy should have to do before they leave college."

Alpha Gamma Rho members calls this house their home.

Taking advantage of the Indian summer days, Eric Webb, Lisa Hay, Stephanie Ballard, Jason Hart and Dave Stiltner lounge outside the Pike house on Tennessee Blvd.

And We Got One

After three years of fighting with the FCC, WNAR received a frequency of 88.3 and changed its name to WMTS in the fall of 1995.

"Since we moved to a frequency, I feel like we actually have a lot more listeners," said Bingham Barnes, the station's music director since 1993.

WMTS is a completely student operated radio station on campus which was started in 1991 by a group of students who wanted to serve the student body with alternative programming directed towards them.

WMTS was originally named WNAR (We Need A Radio). For the first three years, WNAR broadcast on the MTSU cable channel while waiting for an FM frequency.

Since WMTS is a non-commercial station, it attempts to provide the community with music and information not found on commercial stations. WMTS prides itself on its free-form format, which allows the diversity of programming that it is trying to encourage by allowing each DJ to program his or her own show.

"The music we play you can't hear anywhere else," Barnes said. Many of the bands whose music they play are student bands or local bands.

WMTS caters to most types of listeners, by playing an assortment of "alternative", "hip hop", and "heavy metal." There are specialty shows ranging from "hard core/punk" and "techno" to "alternative Christian", "world music" and the infamous talk show which expresses the concerns of the MTSU student life.

WMTS has two main purposes. The first is to train students for future careers in broadcasting. The second is to provide informational, cultural, and alternative music programming for MTSU and the Murfreesboro community. WMTS airs seven days a week between 9 a.m. and 3 a.m.

DJ Matt Hamilton concentrates on his program "Surf Show."

"You mean to tell me that someone actually still uses vinyl records? I thought they went out decades ago." According to Bingham Barnes "vinyl is the 'in' thing once again."

usic, anyone?

by Monica Schlageter

Students who are not familiar with the Music Department on campus may think it's all about having a band to play at halftime of the football games. But there's so much more to music at MTSU.

Of course, the Band of Blue is an integral part of the music program. Before school starts every year, members of the marching band are already at work. The musicians and flag members come together to spend a tireless week learning drills and music for the first show of the season.

"Band Camp is a lot of hard work, but after a preformance all the work pays off," said trumpet player Robert Foster.

The Symponic band is also a major part of the music department. Students in this band battle for chair positions with their instrument section to see who is the best.

For aspiring musicians that like to add swing to their music the Jazz Ensemble is a great experience. The music department also forms ensembles for every instrument throughout the school year, such as a clarinet choir, brass ensembles, percussion ensembles and wind ensembles. Students with vocal talent may also join the choir.

Senior music students must perform solo recitals in order to fulfill requirements for their degree. Though it can be a nervewracking experience, according to students who have lived through it, it is rewarding to know their countless hours of practice and study have paid off.

The Music Department is also responsible for bringing in outstanding musical groups from across the country and around the world to perform concerts on campus. The Wright Music Hall also plays host to the Stones River Chamber Players and the Middle Tennessee Symphony, who give several concerts throughout the year.

"Equality is Civility"

E a cry for quality

by Kris Wetzel

The Uniform Equality Committee (UEC) was formed last June to facilitate the adoption of a sexual orientation statement in the university's non-discrimination statement.

The UEC proposal will not affect ROTC and Affirmative Action non-discrimination policies. The UEC is a committee under the Lambda Association, the campus organization for gays, lesbians and bisexuals.

The UEC released a 90-page report on March 28 at a press conference attended by local news stations and newspapers.

"This report is a starting place for the university," said Michael Grantham, chair of the UEC. "We hope that MTSU will publish their own report with 100 percent more research than we have done."

The report includes the UEC resolution, 12 appendices and a request for the formation of a presidential task force for further assessment of the campus climate towards sexual orientation.

"The 'Equality is Civility' campaign is a united effort among Tennessee and neighboring universities to clarify the issue and initiate greater social change," Grantham said.

Copies of the report were sent to President James Walker and Vice-President for Student Affairs Robert LaLance. Grantham said he expects LaLance to take the report to the Student Affairs Sub-Council, the organization under the Tennessee Board of Regents (TBR) for student affairs administrators.

The report was also sent to David Esa, the chair of the sexual orientation task force formed by TBR in February to assess whether a sexual orientation statement should be adopted into a system-wide policy.

On April 15, the task force passed a resolution to leave the decision to include a sexual orientation statement up to individual universities.

The UEC began to assist other campus gay, lesbian and bisexual groups in January in response to the formation of the sexual orientation task force.

The Tennessee Campus Index (TCI), available on the Lambda Web site, links the UEC with other campus organizations. Lambda is currently the only gay, lesbian and bisexual campus group in Tennessee that has a World Wide Web site, according to Devon Wlodyga, UEC member. The TCI was developed in anticipation of the need for state-wide mobilization, and can be assessed on Lambda's web site at http://www.mtsu.edu/~mtlamda.

The following departments, programs and organizations have given formal support to the UEC: Faculty Senate, Concerned Faculty and Administrative Women, Women's Studies program, Holocaust Studies program, Wesley Foundation, Panhellenic Council, Students for Environmental Action, Philosophy Department, Womyn's Political action Group, Honors Student Association, Lambda Association, Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Social Work, College Democrats, June Anderson Women's Center, Speech and Theater Department, History Department, English Department and American Association of University Professors.

"We are hoping by gathering departmental support that it will testify to the will of the university," Grantham said. "We will gain strength through departmental support, faculty support and, if possible, student support."

Michael Grantham, UEC chairman, discusses the adoption of the sexual orientation clause during an open meeting in the fall.

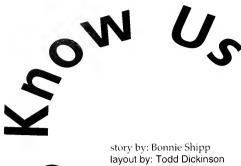

".... a starting place for the university...."

UEC members Michael Grantham, Martin Topping and Richie Smith sit at an information table in the KUC. Getting information on the proposal are Scott Wing and Marianne Dedmon.

There are many campus organizations that give back to the community that allows them to exist. There is one organization that not only gives back to the MTSU community but also to the Murfreesboro community. They are the Erudite Emancipators.

Celebrating their five year anniversary their goal is to improve the lives of minority college students on campus. They are also improving the lives of high school students by preparing them for college life. The Emancipators also sponsor several events such as Black History Month and in the spring will sponsor a Greek rap session.

On November 1, 1995 the Erudite Emancipators sponsored the third annual "Getting to Know

You" social. The program is a public service activity that addresses the issue of decreasing numbers of African American students graduating from institutions of higheer education. The Erudite Emancipators invite MTSU minority organizations to send representatives to discuss their organizations and offer insight on the collegiate experience.

The Erudite Emancipators: President Inez Chopfield, Keena Davis, advisor Bonnie Shipp, Angela Bond, and Sterling McNeill.

Each year, we have a speaker or panel to share practical ideas about succeeding in academia. The first year, Luther Wright, MTSU alumnus and founder of the organization, was speaker. The second year, Ron Malone, Liberal Arts Advisor, was the speaker. This year, Luther Buie, a Development Studies counsselor and newcomer to MTSU, was the speaker.

After the key note address, dinner is served and MTSU students, faculty, and staff mingle with the high school students and estabish more personal connections. We feel the activity is worthwhile for it allows MTSU students an opportunity to serve as mentors or role models for students who may not have many positive images. It also encourages high school students to consider furthering their education at some institution, although we do promote MTSU. We hope to continue the activity each fall with greater response from the area high school students.

New Adult Service Cent. gives non-traditional students

A Place of Their Own

by Monica Schlageter

The Adult Service Center received a new look this year when its office moved from Peck Hall to the Keathley University Center.

The Adult Service Center was created by the University to serve as a base for non-traditional students. The center which was previously in Peck Hall moved to a office six times larger, after the University made resources available. The new center has facilities for students to eat, study, relax, and interact with each other.

"It's a great place for me to have quiet so I can study," said Darlene Klemm, a senior social work major. "When you're stressed out, everyone up here is all smiles. They're like a family."

The center was created from the request of the student organization Older Wiser Learners, (OWLS). The center is aimed at non-traditional students. Adult Service Center Director Dr. Carol Ann Baily does not define non-traditional students as old, but as any student that has adult responsibilities.

The new location, used previously as a storage area, provides room for programs and services. The center provides forms for financial aid and parking permits. It is also the home for OWLS and the Pinnacle Society.

OWLS has 200 members and has monthly activities. Such activities allow students to interact with each other while visiting a museum or watching a school play. The Pinnacle Society is for students 25 and older that have a good GPA.

The Adult Service Center is here to provide any kind of support according to Director Baily. The center is open Monday through Thursday from 7:30 a.m.-7:30 p.m. and Friday 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

At the first sign of fair weather, students start taking their lunches outside for picnics in the warm sunshine.

Looking for luck, Kent Fly and Matt Gipson search for four-leaf clovers in the grass in front of Peck Hall.

Spring Sprung

Winter coats and sweaters start disappearing. Green leaves and pink blossoms start reappearing. The semester winds down and everybody has the same disease--SPRING FEVER!

The Knoll is the headquarters for those with spring fever. After an unusually long winter, students were more than happy to join in Spring Week festivities in April, with free food, an outdoor "drive-in" movie and the Battle of the Knoll band contest.

Hackey-sack and frisbee games begin again, and it seems like every other pair of feet have a pair of in-line skates attached to them as they whizz down the sidewalks.

Whether congregating during lunch, or sunning in the warm spring air, the MTSU campus came back to life at the first sign of spring.

David Sukbalm, with MTSU Housing, serves up tasty dogs for students during Spring Week activities on the knoll.

Raider Party candidates offered students free food on the knoll during the first day of spring SGA elections.

With blossoms in bloom, many professors find the great outdoors more conducive to study.

Afraid of the DARK

When the night falls, the fear begins.

Many students, especially females, are scared to walk across campus alone at night.

And they have good reason to be. There have been several reports of attacks on campus this year, from "fondling" to armed robbery, with the victims being female.

No rapes were reported on campus this year, but in the fall rapes were reported in the immediate vicinity of campus, causing even more fear for students who must make long, lonely walks to their cars or classes at night.

But they don't have to be alone on those walks. With the simple touch of the telephone buttons "2424" a campus security escort is at their service for most of the night.

The student patrol may do as many as 65 escorts in one night and are in constant radio contact with campus police in order to report any crimes they may see.

When violent crimes are reported on campus, the Department of Public Safety issues "Campus Crime Alerts" to warn students to be extra cautious. These alerts are posted all over campus and usually include a composite drawing of the suspect and a description.

"It's good to know that campus escorts are there if I ever need to walk to my car or to the library late at night," said Heather Myers, a Rutledge Hall resident. "You never know what could happen around here."

Kim Mackey of Nashville gets an escort from Jason Nichols, a junior in psychology.

The MTSU Department of Safety suggests students take these extra precautions:

- * Do not walk alone, especially at night.
- * Stay away from dark, poorlylighted areas, especially buildings, parking lots, bushes, hedges and alleys.
- * Do not walk with your head down. Walk confidently and watch around you at all times.
- * Never talk to strangers. Never accept rides from a stranger or mere acquaintance. Always inform another person about your destination and expected time of return. This could save your life.
- * Use the University Escort Service (call 2424).

many students use body piercing for personal expression

It's all about expression.
Noses, eyebrows, ears, lips, tounges, belly buttons, nipples and genitals have all fallen victim to body piercing, the latest craze to sweep campus.

"I like the aesthetic look and enjoy the experience of getting it done," said Cameron Marshal of Nashville, who has his nipples, ears, lip, tounge, genitals and nose pierced. "The piercings are nice to have and they become more sensitive over time."

Body piercings are showing up more and more on the MTSU campus, ranging from a simple stud in the nose to a bar through the tounge to elaborate rings in the navel.

There are no stereotypical profiles of body-pierced people. They may be the girl next door who wants to show off a belly button ring in her bikini, the hardcore rocker who uses the piercings as a symbol of artistic freedom, or the rebellious teen who wants to freak out his or her parents when they come home from college one weekend.

And then there are those who simply think it's cool.

"I got my ears pierced at age 15 and my nipples done at 18," Marshal said. "I thought it looked neat, and I had an urge to keep getting parts pierced."

Late night adventures at the 24-Hour Super Wal-Mart

by Sarah Elliott

So it's 1 a.m. You're really tired of sitting around pretending to be studying when really you haven't turned a page in an hour. You grab your roommate—it's time to hit the town. But then you realize, "Hey, I'm in Murfreesboro. There's nothing to do at night in Murfreesboro!" Or is there. The light bulb goes on over your head. You are going to Murfreesboro's hot spot, the center of night life, THE place to be - THE 24-HOUR SUPER WAL-MART!

The opening of the Super Wal-Mart has added a whole new dimension to the life of MTSU students. What could be better than rows upon rows upon rows of endless possibility that never closes? Let your imagination run wild! Stock up on caffeine and donuts, soap and deoderant, socks and towels... anything you could ever want right at your fingertips.

Of course, if you are like most college students and have no money, you can wander for hours picking out all the things you would buy if you had any money. You can play with the toys, play a game of hide-and-seek, sample the food, and jut generally annoy the employees.

And so, the wonderful Super Wal-Mart has helped many students end that "I-can't-take-it-any-more-I-have-to-get-out-of-here-but-there's-nothing-to-do" dilemma. So, shoppers and college students, head to Wal-Mart - It's THE place to be!

Awareness Is Key

"College student" is not necessarily synonymous with "irresponsible."

That's part of the message that was sent across campus during Alcohol Awareness Week April 8-12. Two campus organizations, the Peer Educators and BACCHUS (Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students) planned many activities during the week.

Assistant Dean of Students Rodney Bennett and Coordinator of Student Programs Margarita Vilanova organized this year's Alcohol Awareness Week to help students make wise choices about alcohol.

Events included an information table at the KUC that provided information about alcohol abuse and its effects, a sidewalk chalk contest with the theme "Positive Choices for the 21st Century," and a car smash in the KUC courtyard. The car that was smashed was in an accident earlier this year that involved alcohol.

On Tuesday, Gloria Hamilton, associate professor of psychology, spoke on the adverse effects of alcohol on women. That evening a luminary lighting was held. The lighting ran down Tennessee Blvd. and all the way up to Todd Library. Each candle represented a person who has been killed in an alcohol related accident.

On Wednesday, a fair was held in the KUC courtyard, with activities as Twister, a pie toss, and a bake sale.

BACCHUS and the Peer Educators, which are affiliated with BACCHUS, sponsored a seatbelt relay during the fair. On Thursday, different groups were on hand to serve "mock tails" (non-alcoholic cocktails).

The Peer Educators became an official campus organization in January. The members are part of the new program "SHARE" (Students Helping and Reaching out to Everyone). Peer educators provide students with a confidant who can also refer them to campus resources.

BACCHUS, which deals with responsible decision-making among students, especially in the area of alcohol, sponsors the training for the peer educators. The group is trained to talk one-on-one with students and present educational programs on issues such as alcohol and drug awareness, sexual assault and date rape.

If DISASTER strikes

by Mark T. Gibson

In an effort to help local rescue workers maintain their proficiency, four MTSU students were "killed" and many more "wounded" during a mock emergency in Murphy Center on April 26.

Jeff Frey, a registered nurse, led the efforts in the mock disaster, while Renee Duggar, RN, coordinated the overall drill.

"The purpose of the exercise is to see how quickly rescue workers can respond to an emergency at MTSU," Frey said. "Secondly, we want to measure how fast we get the wounded people triaged and moved to the hospital."

Triage is the are on the scene where seriously wounded people are separated from minor injuries and fatalities. Priorities for transport are established by the person in charge at the scene.

Renee Duggar, who supervised the drill, was at the emergency room at Middle Tennessee Medical Center to observe the emergency room workers' response.

"We worked this time with multiple agencies, including MTSU, the MTSU Police Department, Emergency Management Agency, the Red Cross, and the Murfreesboro Police Department on this drill," Duggar said. "Those are the agencies that would be responsible for responding in an actual emergency."

"We wanted to see that the plan we have on paper works and find out if there are any changes that need to be made," Duggar said. "If something actually occurs, our plan won't be something that someone has stuck in a notebook somewhere."

The hospital is required to hold an "external" drill at least once a year in order to maintain its certification, but there is usually a second one to make sure that the plans stay current in everyone's mind, Duggar said.

"In terms of the two critical areas, we want to go well, triage. . . and critical casualties which are immediately treated in the emergency department, we did very well."

"Where we want to work a little further as in our ambulatory casualties, or 'walking wounded,' and the transport of those patients," she said.

"If you have to have an area that needs work, that's the best one."

Russ Galloway, a physician at the emergency room, said he was pleased with the drill overall, and while it was of minimal importance for medical purposes, the drill provided excellent opportunities to practice prioritizing and transporting patients.

Paramedic Wendy Hackett said the drills are invaluable.

"All EMS personnel, ER personnel and police should be aware that something like this, with mass casualties, could happen," Hackett said.

Wounded students were played by members of the Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Fraternity.

Football hopes to carry momentum into

back to the future

The Blue Raiders came into the season riding the wave of the announcement that they were moving to Division I-A, and they carried that momentum throughout the season.

MTSU finished the season with a 7-4 record and a 6-2 record in the OVC. The Raiders dominated their opponents statistically, gaining 4006 yards on their way to 303 points. Their opponents scored just 201 points on 3323 yards gained.

The Raider offense was led by Brigham Lyons, who led the team in rushing with 939 yards, and Jonathan Quinn, who threw for 1724 yards. Defensively MTSU was led by Nathaniel Claybrooks, who led the team with 108 total tackles, and Anthony McCord who collected 6 sacks and 15 tackles for losses.

The future looks bright for the Raiders with several starters returning and the expected move to Division I-A in 1998.

Lisa Kissee came to MTSU with oustanding credentials. Her first coaching job was with North Dakota. She took over the struggling program and built it into a top 20 Division II program. In 1993, she took over the reigns at Neosho County Community College. She posted a 77-27 record while at Neosho County.

The expectations for the team were low when she came to MTSU. In 1994, the Raiders had finished 7-23. Lisa Kissee performed magic in her first year at Middle Tennessee. The team finished with a 32-7 mark, the first 30-win team in school history.

They also won the first OVC tournament championship and the first NCAA tournament birth in school history. The Raiders finished 10th in District 6 and received votes for the USA Today top 25.

It was a memorable year for the Lady Raiders—a year of could-have-beens and almosts—but a successful one nonetheless.

Though the OVC championship was almost within reach, the Lady Raiders felt the title slip out of their hands. In the OVC tournament, the championship game matched up Austin Peay with the Lady Raiders. MTSU fell to the Lady Governors 60-69, ending the regular season as conference co-champions.

That defeat didn't mark the end of the Lady Raiders' season. The Lady Raiders returned to the NCAA tournament this year for the first time since 1988. They received an at-large bid in the NCAA tournament, but lost to Kansas 57-72.

The Lady Raiders ended their season with a 24-6 record, losing Austin Peay twice, Murray State, Southeast Missouri, Alabama and Kansas. Only two starters will be leaving the team this year, Heather Prater and Trella Thomas.

Guiness Book World record holder begins work on

by Heather Hybarger

On Jan. 10, 11-year-old Michael Kearney went to his first classes on the MTSU campus.

Michael plans to obtain a double masters degree at MTSU, and possibly a doctorate. According to Dr. Donald Curry, Dean of Continuing Studies, Michael was granted a graduate assistantship with non-degree seeking status for the Spring semester of 1996.

Michael is logged in the Guiness Book of World Records for graduating high school at 6-and-a-half years old. He has an Associates of Science degree in Geology from Santa Rosa Junior College, obtained at age 8, also a world record. He has a Bachelor's degree in Anthropology from the University of South Alabama, obtained at age 10, another world record.

Michael's dream is to become a game show host. He lovess cartoons and comic books. He loves to ride his bike and play video games.

According to Dr. Kiyoshi Kawahito, professor of Economics and director of U.S.-Japan Economic Partnership Projects, many people were surprised when the Kearneys chose to come to MTSU.

"They were interested in a flexible graduate program that would enable the versatile Michael to explore a few different fields first and possibly double-major later," Kawahito said.

"The most important news and the biggest publicity...are yet to come...when Michael earns his master's degree," Kawahito said. "the university and community should not forget what brough the Kearneys here: loving care about the education of Michael and the welfare of the whole family."

Michael and his family have received much attention, having been guests on several television shows local to Nashville. Michael's father, Kevin, also hinted that Michael may have the opportunity to host a game show in Nashville.

Carl E. Lambert

Michael's sister, Maeghan, is 10. She will graduate high school in the next year or two. She plans to attend MTSU and obtain a degree in veterinary medicine. She also wants to be a sprinter in the Olympics.

Michael and Maeghan are special children, but according to Kevin, there are hundreds of children just like them. These are children that go unrecognized or are diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD), and placed on medication.

"I believe that ADDis a fad," Kevin said. "It is destroying the intellectual capabilities of the next generation."

Michael has been diagnosed with all 12 symptoms of ADD, but instead of giving him medication to slow him down, Kevin and Cassidy, his mother, sped up Michael's education. They let Michael learn at his own pace.

"(Michael) went to college at 6 because he had finished high school," Kevin said. "He graduated college at 10 because his program had ended. It's not to rush him, it's just to continue with his education."

The road has not been perfect, though. The Kearneys have come across opposition from all sides. Kevin and Cassidy wrote a book about children like Michael and Maeghan, but could not get it published in the United States. They were told it would have no audience. A Japanese company now has exclusive rights to the Kearneys' book.

The Kearneys have had to relocate five times in order to give Michael the best education possible.

"The thing we haven't handled well is the relocation," Kevin said.

Cassidy, who attends classes with Michael, has seen problems arise with other students.

"I see kids dropping out of class when he shows up because they don't want their grade point average ruined," she said. "I see adults who think I am the student and brought Michael in for day care. Others have sat right next to him and cheated off him."

The Kearneys were happy with their experience at MTSU so far.

"I was received quite well," Michael said. "They all accepted me with open arms. They all wanted to know more about me and that was really nice."

Michael believes that children don't get the respect they deserve.

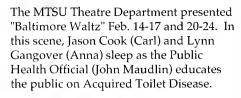

"Most of the time (adults) don't believe you," Michael said. "Everybody imagines children to be pathological liars. All kids are intelligent, kids just can't express their intelligence."

"They can't tell grown-ups about their feelings if grownups don't take the time to listen.

I consider that one of the biggest problems in America today."

good start

The MTSU baseball team enjoyed another fine season. The season started of with a huge win against SEC powerhouse Alabama 4-3. From that point on it was an up and down season.

The Blue Raiders ended the season with a 28-23 record. Their 13-7 record in the OVC was good enough for themto earn the second seed in the OVC tournament. The Raiders opened up the tournament at home against seventh seeded Murray State. The Blue Raiders faced elimination after losing to Murray State 9-13.

The Raiders were then eliminated by Eastern Kentucky 4-5. The Blue Raiders finished the 1996 season with a 28-26 overall record.

men's team shines; women's team improves lose some

The MTSU men's tennis team finished with the best record in school history. The Raiders won the OVC title for the sixth consecutive year. The Blue Raiders went undefeated in conference play by accumulating a 7-0 record. This came as no surprise because the MTSU men's tennis team is 50-5 in conference play. The Blue Raiders also enjoyed being ranked as high as number 21 in the national rankings. They also won a birth into the NCAA Regional III Regionals for the second year in a row. Yet the second seeded Raiders fell in the first round to Alabama 3 matches to 4.

The womens tennis team showed considerable improvement under second year coach David Thornton. After posting a disappointing 8-15 record in his first year at MTSU, Thornton led the Raiders to a 16-10 record in 1996. By doing so the Raiders won not only the regular season but also the tournament championship. Coach Thornton also won the OVC Coach of the Year award. MTSU never lost an OVC game going 8-0 in conference play, including wins in the OVC Tournament against Morehead State(5-0), Southeast Missouri(6-1), and Tennessee Tech(5-3).

They marched out of grief. They marched out of anger. They marched out of love. They were marching for their families. They were marching for their friends. They were marching against the violence that made them all victims.

"I lost a brother to a gun at the wrong place at the wrong time," said Mary Swader of Murfreesboro. "The only way for the problem to be solved is for everybody to come together. It's not a black and white issue."

The Unity Parade, a march against crime and violence, brought together Families of Victims, friends and concerned members of the community on Saturday, April 6. Beginning in the Greenland Drive parking lot and marching down Tennessee Blvd. and E. Main Street, the group congregated at the city plaza for a time of remembrance.

"This march is to unify the community to stand against crime and violence," said Richard Sibert, one of the organizers of the event.

Remembering those who have died because of domestic violence, guns, drug abuse and violent crime, the victims' families and friends carried photos of their loved ones, posters and banners in remembrance of them. Troy Wade, William Sway, Corey

Ward, Scotty Gann—just a few of the faces in the photos and names on the banners whose memories were carried along with the marchers.

"We, as victims' families, suffer daily," said Cresseda Howse, whose baby brother, Corey Ward, was fatally shot Dec. 9. "I want justice to be served and for people to realize a higher up will see to it. These victims do not need to be forgotten."

Those gathered for the parade included MTSU students, local high school students, members of area churches, Smyrna police commissioner Sally Wals, and Congressman Bart Gordon.

"We've lost two residents of campus housing to crime," said Tracy Holt, MTSU area coordinator, remembering the most recent victim, Andrew Poklemba, who was killed in December. "I wanted to show my respect for them and their families and my concern about violence in general. It is a problem that is out of control."

"We don't want this to be a one time thing," said Mary Swader, who said the Families of Victims will try to make the parade an annual event.

As their feet hit the pavement, and their chants filled the air, the participants in the Unity Parade hoped, with each step they took, their grief would lessen and their message would be heard.

"Peace, please."

For the fifth year in a row, the MTSU Mock Trial Team has taken the nation by storm.

Headed by Dr. John Vile and Dr. Thomas VanDervort, the Mock Trial Team had an impressive year in the courtroom. In this year's MTSU Invitational Tournament, held Nov. 10-11, Tracy Brakebill's team came in second, John Hardin's team came in fourth, and Deryck Poe and Mandy Smith's team came in seventh. Over 30 teams competed in the tournament.

The Mock Trial Teams competed next in the Regional tournament at Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky. Tracy Brakebill's team came in fourth and Keith Slocum's team came in sixth in the tournament held Feb. 9-10. Taking home individual awards were Kim Gulden, Aimee Seitzman and John Hardin, who were named Top Attorneys, and Thais Mootz, Deryck Poe and Ben Lane, who were named Top Witnesses.

After their performance in the regional competition, the teams moved on to the National Silver Tournament in St. Paul, Minn. Out of 40 teams, the MTSU team headed by captain Keith Slocum came in second overall. Thais Mootz was named an Outstanding Witness.

Tracy Brakebill's team went on to the National Championship in Des Moines' Drake University March 29-31. The MTSU team came in ninth place, with John Hardin awarded All American Attorney and Aimee Seitzman named an All American Witness. Seitzman also continued into the National Honors Round.

The Mock Trial Team is an invaluable learning experience for anyone interested in public speaking, political science or law. Even though the group was only established on campus seven years ago, it has grown into a first-rate team. As an indication of the team's growth, the MTSU Invitational Tournament started six years ago with only campus teams competing, and is now one of the largest mock trial competitions in the nation.

Celebrating their second place win at the National Silver Flight Tournament are Dr. /anDervort, Dr. Vile, Aimee Seitzman, John Hardin, Thais Mootz, Larry Crismon, Keith Slocum, Scott Langford, Mandy Smith and Billy Jones.

Students Week

An International Banquet capped off International Culture Week April 8-13. Many international students came to the International Banquet dressed in native costume.

International students were able to view exhibits from their home countries before the International Banquet on April 13.

International students and everyone else on campus were invited to an International Tea on Wednesday during International Culture Week.

Amanda Ball, who has extensively traveled in study abroad programs, pauses before the Thailand exhibit outside the International Banquet. For every country represented by an international student on campus, a cultural display table was exhibited in the JUB lobby.

A very GREEK Week

by Nancy Figueras

Greek Week: it sounds like fun, but what the heck is it?

Greek Week originally started out as a way for sororities and fraternities to showcase their community service projects. Throughout the last 10 to 15 years, it has allowed the Greeks to combine crazy games and fun with their common practice of community service. This year the week was held April 8-12.

What do sororities and fraternities get out of Greek Week? Nothing but a good feeling. Everyone works together to raise as much supplies and money as they can for particular charitable organizations. This year $1500, instead of the expected $400 to $500, was raised for Special Olympics from a coin drop "Greek god and goddess" contest.

More than 300 cans of foodwere collected for Second Harvest Food Bank, which were taken up as admission to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon party after All-Sing.

A toga party capped off the week at the Sigma Chi house, and all "togas" (sheets) were donated to the Ronald McDonald House.

"Participation in Greek Week was very good this year," said Greek Life Director Vic Felts. Felts credits the way Greek Week was organized this year for the good turnout. Instead of evryone working against each other, different groups of sororities and fraternities were grouped together in teams. Team Thor, consisting of AD Π , APP, ZTA, KS, SAE and SN, won the most points from the different events.

"There is no one winner in Greek Week because everyone's part contributes to helping out a special organization," Felts said. "The biggest reward is satisfaction."

Dan Percy, a member of Sigma Nu fraternity, shows a little muscle in his Hawaiin print toga. The Toga Party at the Sigma Chi house capped off Greek Week '96.

Doyline Lloyd drops in some change to show her support of Alpha Delta Pi candidate Rachel Morley in the Greek god and goddess contest held during Greek Week.

Dave Westol presented the Greek organizations with his lecture "Hazing On Trial." At least 75 percent of each chapter was expected to attend this Greek Week event.

Behind the fun and excitement that comes with being involved in a Greek fraternity or sororty, there a group of students or several groups of students chosen to ensure that everything runs smoothly. These groups of students are the Panhellenic Council, the Interfraternity Council, and he United Greek Council. These organizations promote and regulate the major characteristics of any Greek system: scholarship, leadership, friendhip, and service.

"This year's councils have done an excellent ob of regulating Greek activities and enforcing the ules set up by the Greek system, "said Vic Felts, Director of Greek Life.

The Panhellenic Council here at Middle Tennessee State University governs over six sororities. Each week the members of this council meet to discuss sorority issues, to share ideas, and to support the Greek system as a whole. The council also plans philantropic projects to help organizations such as the Arthritis Foundation, Speech and Hearing, and Ronald McDonald House. The Panhellenic Council's major projects this year include: an Easter Egg Hunt for MTSU employees' children, a Christmas party for local kids, and a Halloween party for narried student housing children. Rush is another really important project for the council.

The Interfraternity Council is responsible for regulating and controlling the activities of MTSU's 11 fraternities.

"One of the main goals of this organization is to work hard to help new students fit in, meet people, and have fun," said Danny Turpen, IFC president.

The members of this council also sponsor many events such as raising money for Second Harvest during Greek Week and providing a float for Homecoming. The Interfraternity Council is a strong promoter of unity within the fraternities. The council tries to provide a Greek environment that is acceptable for all Greeks everywhere.

The United Greek Council is another important Greek organization. It serves to coordinate and govern the four black Greek sororities and the four black Greek fraternities. This council is a big promoter of interaction through meetings, involving themselves in cooperative programs, and engaging in other supportative activities.

The Panhellenic Council, the Interfraternity Council, and the United Greek Council all are essential to the structure of the Greek system. Without these organizations, the activities of sororities and fraternities would be chaotic and not very interactive.

a new place to Fly—

by Nancy Figueras

A bigger, better, and brighter future lies in store for Greek life at Middle Tennessee State University. Plans for a new Greek Row on Rutherford Boulevard have triggered much excitement among sororities and fraternities. In fact, some fraternities have already submitted plans for a fraternity house to the University Planning Center.

"By making the Greek system more visible, it will encourage more people to participate and therefore be initiated,"said D.J. Denning, president of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Many citizens of Murfreesboro have had a problem with Greek housing in their neighborhoods. Furthermore, zoning laws have prevented land from being bought to develope Greek housing in the city. Therefore these plans for a new Greek Row will seemingly satisfy everyone involved. The plan calls for a row of Greek fraternity houses and a large sorority building to be built on land already owned by the university. This will be a big step for sororities who have been kind of restricted in their small chapter rooms in Cummings lobby.

Right now their only major obstacle is money. MTSU has already committed funds for this project, but they will not spend a penny until there is an adequate plan to pay for it. The plan for paying for this new Greek Row is through bonds in which fraternities would pay off the bond by paying rent to the university. Once the house is paid for they would acquire equity from continued rent payments.

The plans for a Greek Row on campus have attracted much support from fraternities and sororities because it would be beneficial to their organizations. Many Greeks are hopeful that the new Greek Row will increase both the Greek population and encourage involvement.

Winners were announced and awards were given out at the Sigma Chi house's Toga Party, which capped off the Greek Week activities.

Editor's Parting Words

They're still here.

1932, 1941, 1957, 1968, 1970, 1981, 1985, 1990. . . Midlanders from 1926 to the present still stand on the shelves in Room 306 of the James Union Building. Likely, they also still stand in closets and bookshelves of many of your parents or grandparents, aunts and uncles. My parents still drag our their 1970 Midlanders and look up friends they remember from their college days. Each book has its own story to tell—stories of the lives, loves, laughter and lessons learned by our predessesors here at Middle Tennessee State University.

I've put four years worth of blood, sweat and tears (and a few laughs along the way) into the Midlander, and I care about its future deeply. I have been dedicated to the idea that the yearbook is vital to the university as a permanent history record of each year—if not for any other reason. But I would also like to think that the Midlander means something special to those who order it—printed proof that they are surviving college, a desire to pass the memories of their years here on to future generations, pride in their accomplishments and in their alma mater.

It's been a long, hard journey to reach this point—the completion of my last Midlander at Middle Tennessee State University. I've had a wonderful staff this year—Todd, Nancy, Monica, Adrian, Sarah. They have kept a close eye on deadlines, finished stories and layouts relatively on time, showed up for most meetings, helped with portraits and special events, put up with my somewhat disorganized office, and shared my enthusiasm for the yearbook. With their help, this 1996 version is one of the best Midlanders ever.

I must give credit to Sarah for her ideas on how to organize this year's book. If you haven't noticed already, we went with a different format than traditional yearbooks follow. Our idea is that college is not divided into separate sections of life, so the yearbook shouldn't be either. Every aspect of college life blends together to form the complete picture. With this in mind, we made the "Features" section a collage of stories and events from different aspects of campus life, and included a calendar to guide readers through the year. And at the back, we indexed people, departments, faculty, sports teams, organizations and Greeks into concise chapters. We think this is a good way to organize the book. We hope you do too.

I have to thank Chris Ervin, Collage editor, for pleasantly sharing workspace with me for the past two years. I also thank the staff of Sidelines for a good working relationship and Paul for a little comedy relief. Even though getting photographs was sometimes like pulling teeth, I thank Brian and Carl for giving me quality photos. What can I say, Carl, you're an institution around here!

I must also thank Jenny for all her support and help with everything from portraits to department photos. She definitely went above and beyond many, many times. And Brenda, thanks for keeping my messages straight. I'll teach you how to do a yearbook yet!

I must also thank Vic Felts with Greek Life for all his help with the Greeks section (even playing photographer now and then) and Photographic Services for providing us with photos on last minute's notice. And I wish Andy Mays, my successor as editor, all the best!

Although our staff and our resources are small, I believe we are doing something important up here in the third floor of the James Union Building. This year marks the point where the status of the Midlander makes a turn for the better. We have doubled sales and portraits, added about 60 pages, increased coverage and awareness of the book on campus.

It's been an uphill battle all the way, but it's worth every effort. Fifty years from now, perhaps when my grandchildren are attending MTSU, I can pull out my dusty old Midlanders and brag about the good ole days.

They'll still be here.

Thanks to everyone, Allison Goodman, editor

University is a responsibility that belongs to everyone. A lot of changes have been made this year, and plans have been made for many more changes in the future. Football will go to Division 1-A in 1998. Whether or not you agree with the $65 fee increase that was so controversial among students this fall, the new stadium will put MTSU into a new league in the area of sports. Expansion will mean improvement, and with improvement inevitably comes a better image for Oll university as a whole. ON A WARM SPRING DAY, the knoll is the place to be to meet friends, listen to music or just catch a few rays.

Volume 70 of Middle Tennessee State University's official yearbook, the Midlander, was produced by a sixmember, student-run staff in the James Union Building Room 306. The Midlander is an equal opportunity employer and reserves the right to edit any submissions. No portion of this book may be reproduced without written consent of the Midlander.

The book was printed by Herff Jones Publishing of Montgomery, Ala. Bess Oswalt was our in-plant representative and Buz Watson was our field representative. The 256-page, 9x12 book was printed on 80 lb. Bourdeaux paper. The cover is mounted on 160 weight board and uses dark plum and smoky blue covering, with silver foil and prisma foil accents, and an applied Spanish grain pattern. Sixteen pages were printed in four-color process and 16 were printed in spot color, utilizing Herff Jones color #8483, Aspen Blue. The cover was designed by the Midlander staff, using a photo taken by editor Allison Goodman and printed in a duotone of HI # 194, Maroon.

All body copy was set in 12-point Palatino with captions in 10-point Helvetica and photo credit lines in 8-point Helvetica. Headline fonts used include Futura, Palatino and University Roman. Embassy and Times Roman were used in the theme development on the cover, endsheets, opening, closing, dividers and folios.

All layouts, design and copy were created with a Macintosh IIcx on Aldus Pagemaker 5.0 Pagemaster templates. Photographs were provided by staff photographers, Photographic Services and individual students.

Student portraits were taken by Thornton Studios of New York. Scholastic Advertising, Inc., handled advertising sales. Additional inquiries can be addressed to Midlander, Middle
